As an evidence of an awakening in Oregon is the interest taken in fairs the past year, says the Baker City Democrat.

There never were so many county fairs held in Oregon as in the year 1906. In some counties they took the form of industrial fairs promoted by school children and parents.

The inauguration of the county fair system now coming into popular favor, may be counted as one benificent result of the Lewis and Clark fair. The exhibits there shown had the effect of turning the people's attention to the state's resources and stimulating an interest in the productivity and possibilities of the various counties.

It is gratifying to note the change from confetti-throwing street carnivals to county fairs throughout the state. The belittled streets filled with snake charmers, glass-eaters, "Alice the Wonder" and other monstrosities and deformities have happily given way to industrial fairs in which school children rival each other in displaying the finest products their particular locality is capable of bringing forth.

The county industrial fair is educational in its nature and deserves encouragement. It is to be hoped the number to be held next year will double those of this.

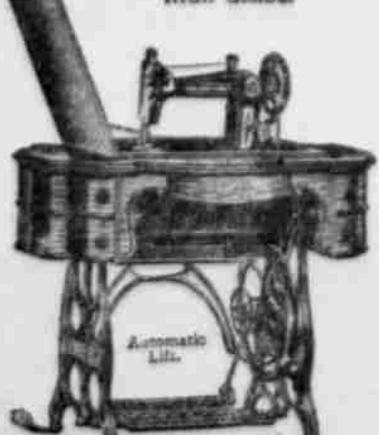

As a result of being an old bachelor with no good wife to milk the cows and carry in the wood, Wil Duncan is carrying his proboscis in a sling awaiting nature to repair the damage to his beauty spot. One evening last week he started to the barn to milk the cows, when he slipped and fell striking his face on the tip of the strainer on the bucket; with such force that his nose was laid open and one eyelid so badly cut just under the eyebrow that the eyeball was exposed. Several stitches were necessary to make things good and fast, and the necessary bandages give him the appearance of having been the principal in an Irish wake. With a wife in the case he might have fared better, and then again, of course, it might have been worse.

A newspaper should be judged by its average upon the whole and not upon any one act of omission or commission. No editor publishes a paper above criticism. If the writer is honest he is bound to offend some one every week in his life. If he does not offend he is flabby, truculent, namby pamby. Every newspaper makes mistakes, but in the long run, week after week, year after year, the paper stands for decency, for right living, for honest thinking. If it speaks fair for these who are doing right and condemns sneaks, cheats and violators of the law then it deserves patronage.—Argus.
